1. INTRODUCTION

Talent-Archive: Cultural & Arts Directory is a centralized web-based platform developed to manage and showcase the artistic and cultural talents of university students. The system enables students to create and maintain digital portfolios highlighting their skills, performances, achievements, and experiences in various cultural disciplines such as music, dance, theatre, visual arts, and traditional performances.

Developed using Java Web Technology and the MVC (Model-View-Controller) architecture, the system provides an efficient and secure environment for students and the HEP Cultural Unit. Students can easily manage their talent portfolios while HEP staff can discover talented individuals, organize cultural programmes, and manage university-owned cultural assets through a centralized platform.

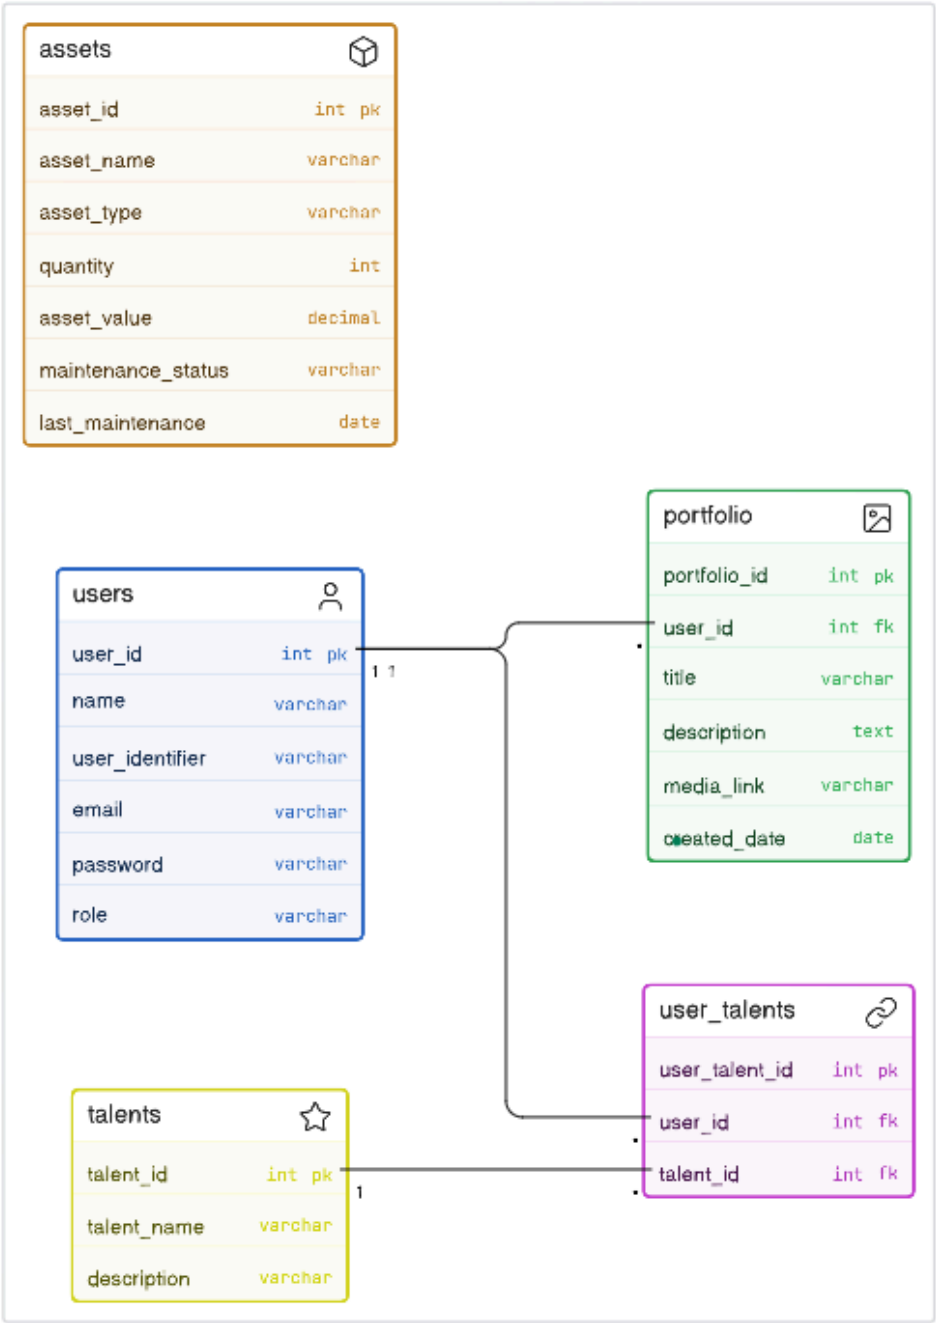

2. PROBLEM STATEMENT

- Student talent information is scattered across multiple departments, making it difficult for HEP to identify suitable participants for cultural programmes.
- There is no centralized platform for students to showcase and maintain their artistic portfolios.
- Cultural assets such as musical instruments and costumes are managed manually, resulting in inefficient tracking and maintenance.
- Manual record keeping increases the possibility of missing, duplicated, or outdated information.
- Searching for students with specific talents requires significant administrative effort.

3. OBJECTIVE

- To develop a centralized web-based Talent Directory for university cultural activities.
- To enable students to create and manage their own Talent Portfolio.
- To allow HEP Cultural Unit staff to efficiently search and discover talented students.
- To provide an Asset Management module for managing university-owned cultural equipment and costumes.
- To improve the efficiency of organizing university cultural programmes through centralized information management.

6. CONCLUSION

Talent-Archive: Cultural & Arts Directory provides a centralized platform for managing university cultural talents and institutional cultural assets. By utilizing Java Web Technology with the MVC architecture, the system offers a secure, scalable, and user-friendly environment for both students and HEP Cultural Unit staff.

Students are empowered to build comprehensive Talent Portfolios showcasing their artistic abilities, achievements, and experiences, while HEP staff gain an efficient tool to identify talented students, organize cultural programmes, and maintain university-owned instruments and costumes. The centralized directory reduces administrative workload, improves information accessibility, and supports more effective planning of cultural activities.

Overall, Talent-Archive strengthens the university's cultural ecosystem by connecting talented students with opportunities while ensuring efficient management of valuable cultural resources.
